This correspondence serves as formal notice regarding statutory protections afforded under Missouri law for individuals and entities who report fire-related incidents. Pursuant to applicable provisions of Missouri law, any person, company, or organization who, in good faith, provides information, reports, or evidence relating to a suspected fire loss, arson incident, or insurance fraud to law enforcement, fire service agencies, or insurance representatives shall be granted immunity from civil liability that might otherwise arise from such disclosure.

This immunity applies provided that:

1. The information is supplied without malice, fraud, or intent to deceive;
2. The reporting party reasonably believes the information to be true at the time it is provided; and
3. The disclosure is made to an authorized entity, including but not limited to:
 - o Fire departments
 - o Law enforcement agencies
 - o Prosecuting attorneys
 - o Insurance companies or their representatives

This immunity does not extend to knowingly false statements, intentional misrepresentation, or actions taken in bad faith.
